Surnames

There is a story behind every surname. However, at times, one can be misled and draw the wrong conclusions. Many a family name recalls an ancestor’s occupation. This obviously, explains the Taylors, the Smiths, the farmers, and even the Chamberlains. It would be totally erroneous, however, for a Mr King, Duke, or Prince, in like manner to imagine that they were of royal descent as their names might suggest. In their case, these go back to completely different circumstances.

In medieval times, many cities held annual pageants or processions in which, on each occasion, members of the same family came to personify the identical figure, such as that of a king, a prince, or a duke. At first this was done for a merely, practical reason. They had learnt the role and, hence, there was no need for them in the following year to study a new part. It also enabled them to make their performance ever more polished and truer to the nature of the character they were meant to portray.

With the passing of time, the family came to regard the specific role as their prerogative. Eventually, they were identified with it, and that is how so many Kings, Dukes, and Princes survive. Their original home was not a castle or a palace, but the stage.

This also explains the otherwise puzzling phenomenon of families bearing the name of Pope, Bishop, or Priest. No one could (legitimately) ever have descended from them as, of course, their very status implied celibacy. People so called can be sure that their ‘titled’ name was not inherited from an ancestor who had filled the ecclesiastical office, but from play acting.

Two men were sitting next to each other at Murphy’s Pub in London. After a while, one bloke looks at the other and says, ‘I can’t help but think, from listening to you, that you are from Ireland.’
The other bloke responds proudly, ‘yes, that I am!’
The first one says, ‘so am I! And where about from Ireland might you be?’
The other bloke answers, ‘I’m from Dublin, I am.’
The first one responds, ‘So am I!’
‘Mother Mary and begora. And what street did you live on in Dublin?’
The other bloke says, ‘a lovely little area it was. I lived on McCleary Street in the old central part of town.’
The first one says, ‘Faith and it’s a small world. So did I! So, did I. Tell me, what year did you graduate?’
The other bloke answers, ‘Well, now, let’s see. I graduated in 1964.’
The first one exclaims; ‘The Good Lord must be smiling down on us! I can hardly believe our good luck at winding up in the same place tonight. Can you believe it, I graduated from St Mary’s in 1964 my own self!’
About this time, Vicky walks up to the bar, sits down, and orders a drink.
Brian, the barman, walks over to Vicky, shaking his head and mutters, ‘it’s going to be a long night tonight.’
Vicky asks, ‘why do you say that, Brian?’ ‘The Murphy twins are drunk again.’
